“

It was an amazing experience at the Maz. The way they talk to you, the way they treat you. We joked and laughed, it was very nice. After the surgery, every member of the team from the surgeon to the anesthesiologist all came and told me they were glad I was okay.

“

Donors to the University Hospital Foundation are pivotal because they are often lending their support to the very early stages of a project rather than the latter stages. That can result in resource amplification, because they're investing in the higher risk but often higher reward individuals and the work that they're doing.

It's important to have up-to-date technology. Having advanced equipment is clinically important, but it also drives research. Donors to the University Hospital Foundation help support the purchase of new equipment.

He [Hugh Bolton] had a kind heart and was always wanting to help those less fortunate. Giving back to the community that he loved, and was loyal to, was very important. It was natural, for example, to donate his time and funding to the University Hospital Foundation.

The prevalence of cardiomyopathies is fairly common. The good news, however, is that thanks to support from donors to the University Hospital Foundation, the Maz has assumed a leadership role in developing ways of identifying the cause of cardiac myopathies, and how to eliminate the condition before they take shape.

As catalysts of change, the University Hospital Foundation and its donors are in a position to identify and engage with innovations in care that could have profound impact on our personal health and the entire health system. As thrilling as that sounds, it is also critically important.
