For most of her life, Jennifer Coleman lived with the constant fear and unpredictability of type 1 diabetes. Nights spent shaking from low blood sugar and days ruled by strict routines were her reality — until donors to the University Hospital Foundation changed her life. Thanks to the Edmonton Protocol, a groundbreaking islet cell transplant developed with donor support, Jennifer no longer needs insulin. “It’s amazing, I don’t have to worry anymore,” she says. Her story is proof that every gift helps transform research into life-changing patient care.

For years, living with end-stage kidney disease meant Jenah Beer's life revolved around long, exhausting trips to a dialysis clinic. Thanks to donor-supported kidney-care programs at the West Edmonton Kidney Care centre, first of its kind outside the walls of the University of Alberta Hospital, Jenah completed home dialysis training in 2025. Now, she can dialyze on her own schedule, feel stronger and reclaim precious time at home with her husband and four cats. Gifts like yours not only give patients like Jenah freedom and stability, but they also help ease the strain on hospital dialysis units — changing lives in countless ways.

Ronna Jevne's life nearly changed forever when she had a stroke this past February. Thanks to donor support, Edmonton's one-of-a-kind stroke ambulance reached her within minutes. A CT scan and life-saving treatment were started before she even reached the hospital, allowing Ronna to return to her life just ten weeks later as if the stroke had never happened. "I can still do everything I did before like reading, writing, walking, hugging," she says. Donors like you make these second chances possible for patients across Alberta.

Dr. Glen Jickling is transforming the future of stroke care, thanks to donor support. His innovative research is tackling two of the biggest challenges in stroke treatment: speed and effectiveness. Through his REDI Stroke project, rapid blood tests were developed to help doctors identify strokes faster and choose the right treatment. Now, his STREAM project is studying how white blood cells can help dissolve blood clots more efficiently, reducing brain damage and improving recovery. Together, this research is giving more patients the chance to return to the lives they love.

Thanks to donors, patients with brain and spinal cord injuries at the University of Alberta Hospital will soon get the care they need, faster with the opening of the new Neuro Rehabilitation Innovation Centre. The Centre will bring advanced rehab technology directly to patients, helping them start recovery sooner and improve their chances of regaining independence. By connecting patients, clinicians and researchers in one state-of-the-art space, this donor-funded centre is transforming hope into real progress for neurological care.
